LSA Recovery, Inc. is an 822 Medically Supervised Outpatient Chemical Dependency Program, which provides a variety of services to individuals as well as family members seeking help with substance abuse and chemical dependence problems.

They believe that chemical dependence treatment requires a detailed knowledge of the history and personality of each patient. This is accomplished by professional and knowledgeable staff that will conduct a complete and thorough interview with the patient and his/her family, as well as contact with their primary care physician. The data is then evaluated by various professional staff members to develop a personalized treatment plan. We organize the plan of care to enable the patient to proceed through the recovery process with a support network, increase their self-esteem, and understand the effects of chemical dependence.

LSA Recovery, Inc. employs multilingual counselors to better serve the needs of our community, including the Eastern European community. Programs are conducted in English, Spanish, Polish, Russian, and Ukrainian.

NYTC, Inc. opened its Stay'n Out Programs in 1977. They pioneered the concept of beginning therapeutic community treatment while the client was incarcerated and continuing in the community upon release from prison. In-prison Stay'n Out programs operated for 3 decades until the New York State fiscal crisis of 2008. This model was researched from inception showing a 77 percent success rate based upon a 5-year follow-up study conducted by NDRI. Serendipity- Community-based residential and outpatient programs have continued as the bridge for a healthy transition back to the community and serve a primary role as an Alternative to Incarceration (ATI).

Paul J. Cooper Center for Human Services offers outpatient substance abuse treatment services and anger management classes. Clients who come to the Paul J. Cooper Center for help are first assigned a case manager who, along with an intake coordinator, determines the best plan for treatment. Programs are usually three to six months in length, but may be longer. Treatment consists of group and family therapy, with an emphasis on treating the whole person and helping them get their life on track. With this in mind, assistance may be provided for medical needs, relationships, vocational challenges or educational needs and affordable housing. Groups focus on anger management, relapse prevention, behavior modification and drug and alcohol education.

Tri-Center is committed to teaching clients how to re-establish their lives and shape their destinies. Tri Center has developed a cognitive/behavioral Approach to treating chemical dependents with an early focus on relapse prevention. Throughout treatment, emphasis is placed on effecting positive change in the client's maladaptive cognitive and behavioral functioning. The practice of rational self-analysis is at the core of the TRI philosophy.

The efficacy of the Day Program at TRI Center is achieved through a highly Structured setting in which total abstinence can be achieved and maintained. During this initial phase of treatment, TRI Center utilizes intensive Relapse Prevention education and counseling along with Urine Drug Screenings to ensure clients a smooth withdrawal process, thus decreasing the potential for relapse.

Serendipity I for men and Serendipity II for women are residential programs primarily for individuals in the criminal justice system who have a substance abuse problem requiring longer-term residential intervention. These two programs also offer treatment to former prisoners re-entering society, as well as providing an effective alternative-to-incarceration to others so that they may become productive citizens who no longer are a burden to society.

These programs use the therapeutic community (TC) model which has been achieving success for over forty years. Each Serendipity program consists of individuals living together while they work through the personal and practical issues that block them from living fulfilled and drug-free lives. Within a disciplined, hierarchical structure based upon peer self-help, participants gradually regain their self-confidence while furthering their education or job training, re-uniting with their families, and otherwise taking steps to return to society.

The DOL will provide intensive, individualized and group employment services to released individuals under the supervision of the Division in the five boroughs of New York City and in the Mid-Hudson region through the Parolee Vocational Rehabilitation Service (PVRS). They are on site at Parole area locations. Additionally, the staff serving the Mid-Hudson region will, upon occasion, visit pre-release centers in correctional facilities in Westchester County.

Individual and or group services will be provided to released individuals registered for services with PVRS, including a comprehensive vocational assessment and the development of an employability plan. The network of employment services available through PVRS will be enhanced through linkages with local Job Services Offices and service delivery areas. Services to released individuals will include the following:

- Intake screening either at DOL or on-site at Parole area offices.
- Written individualized vocational assessment.
- Job referral and placement.
- Training and education referral and placement.
- Promotion of Work Opportunity Tax Credit (WOTC), Federal Bonding Program (FBP), if available, and other employer incentives.
- Testing, including aptitude tests and interest inventories, as appropriate.
- Job Seeking Skills Workshops.
- Counseling services, both individual and group, relative to securing and retaining employment, as appropriate.
- Follow-up with clients who enter employment.
- Linkages with Job Services Veterans programs and other veteran's services networks.

Contact Person: Marlene Cedeno

The Center for Employment Opportunities is divided into two phases. The first phase is the vocational development phase, which involves four (4) days of job readiness classes and one-day with a job developer. The second phase of the program is the neighborhood work program, which involves short-term low skilled labor paid on a daily basis at minimum wage. The program generally requires that individuals have a non-violent conviction and be eager to begin work. They are concerned with a parolee's motivation, not necessarily his skills. After Phase Two, CEO has job placement specialists that will assist in finding permanent employment for its parolee clients.
